School Fair Meeting

The re-organization meeting of the Chinook and District School Fair called for Feb. 1st, was held in the Phone Office, with N. F. Marcy, chairman and Miss Jensen, Sec., officers pro tem. A motion, "that we hold a School Fair in 1936," was passed unanimously. Owing to the severe weather during January some of the districts had not as yet appointed their Director. The day being cold and the roads in poor condition, only a small group were present. Some of those from a distance argued that the meeting proceed to complete the organization for 1936. Others, [some from from a distance also] argued that the meeting should be adjourned to a later date, to permit of a better attendance, and a motion to this effect was carried. This School Fair has been carried on in the past in a truly democratic co-operative manner and it should continue to produce healthy competition and unity among the schools of the organization. The date of the call of the adjourned meeting will be set later. This is an open re-organization meeting to which everyone interested is requested to attend and take part. It has been adjourned for your benefit, so that when the meeting is again called be sure to be present with your criticism or suggestions to make the Fair Bigger and Better in 1936.

N. F. Marcy,
Chairman.

The Farm Problem For 1936

At this time of the year farm owners, farm operators and others interested in agricultural production are necessarily giving a great deal of thought and attention to the all-important problem of what to raise and how much to produce during the 1936 season.

Time was when this problem, if it was a problem at all, was a comparatively simple one. All that was necessary to do was to divide the land already prepared and the additional acreage to be prepared in the spring into two portions, one area to be seeded to wheat and the other to oats, with some provision for a small plot for vegetables for household use. In those days there were one or two standard varieties of wheat and oats and all the farmer had to plan in advance was which of these he would seed, and when the spring came to go ahead and seed it. Having done this, his chances of reaping a fair crop yielding him a reasonable return for his labor were pretty good.

But those days are gone and probably gone forever. Down the corridor of the past two decades, the problem of what to raise and how much of it has become more complex with each succeeding year, and to-day the question bristles with so many complications and ramifications as to require the wisdom of a Solomon and the acumen of the proverbial Philadelphia lawyer, plus the insight of a skilful prognosticator if a reasonably satisfactory answer is to be the outcome.

If the farm operator in the prairie provinces wants to eliminate the gamble from his coming season's activities, he must not only be an experienced tiller of the soil and husbandman, but he also needs to be a student, a scientist, an economist and a meteorological expert. In other words he must achieve the unachievable.

When preparing his plans for the year's work the farmer not only has to take into consideration the condition of his land, the state of its suitability and preparedness for various types of crops, the probable availability of the kind of seed he would like to sow, the nature and extent of the hazard to which various crops and varieties may be subjected to deterioration and loss by insect pests and diseases, the probable effect of prospective weather conditions on those crops, the availability of nutriment in the soil required by different types of crops, the probable demand for the resultant yield in the local and world markets but many other factors which, for lack of space, must be dismissed in the auctioneer's phrase "too numerous to mention".

Many of these questions the farmer, because of his own circumstances and local conditions must decide for himself with very little assistance from outside sources, but fortunately there is aid available for him in his efforts to weigh probabilities and prospects of the effect of market trends, market conditions, national policies and to some extent even of international situations and relations on his intended activities, but even the information available on these factors can only be a guide, subject as they are and more particularly in recent years, to great and rapid fluxes.

One of the most valuable of these guides, entitled "The Agricultural Situation and Outlook, 1936" has just been issued by the Dominion Department of Agriculture with the co-operation of the department of trade and commerce. The information it contains is compiled by the sub-committee on the agricultural outlook of the National Advisory Committee on Agricultural Statistics.

The government pamphlet contains a careful and concise survey of agricultural conditions as they existed in Canada in 1935, together with industrial conditions as they affected agriculture, beneficially and adversely, and the prospective position of agriculture for 1936, including some specific conclusions which cannot fail to be of material aid to every farmer who reads it.

As the foreword to this 52-page bulletin says: "This annual review of the position of Canadian agriculture contains basic information which will assist farmers in planning their business operations in 1936. It is, of course, impossible to take into consideration drastic changes in international affairs which might develop before the close of the year. The report, however, presents an analysis of the factors most likely to affect farm income in the coming year."

A particularly valuable feature of the report is the summarized conclusions published by the sub-committee with respect to each of the important cereal grains and the several divisions of livestock, together with the reasons which lead up to these conclusions.

One who reads the bulletin cannot fail to be impressed with the fact that, generally speaking, the position of agriculture has shown improvement in the past year and that the factors in support of further improvement in 1936 are material, but it should be pointed out that the farmer who is carefully and intelligently studying the situation is the farmer who is in the best position to take advantage of this prospective continuing upward trend.

The pamphlet should be in the hands of every farmer in the prairie provinces and is worthy of study by all who are interested in the welfare of agriculture in the west and that means every citizen of the three provinces.

If Heart Is Healthy

Operations On It Can Be Performed With Success

A news item from Philadelphia reminds us that the heart, when healthy, can stand a lot of punishment, and that surgeons are still performing marvels. A youth was stabbed in a street argument and rushed to the hospital, where they put four stitches in his heart. He is reported to have a fair chance of recovery.

That a man may live after his heart has been pierced is well known to surgeons. One of the most remarkable cases on record is that of Sir Arthur Slaggett, whose heart was pierced by a sharp pointed bullet from a rifle in the hands of a Mahdi rebel, at the battle of Khartoum. Sir Arthur lived 44 years after the wound. Another interesting case was that of a British war veteran who was wounded by a German bullet in 1917, and who lived with the missile in his heart for 13 years. He died of Bright's disease.

An operation as delicate as that performed on the Philadelphia youth was undertaken successfully by Dr. Claude S. Beck on a man suffering from angina pectoris. He severed the end of the pectoral muscle in the man's chest and fastened it to the wall of the heart to encourage the flow of blood, slowed down by the disease. Resourceful was a Canadian, Dr. Samuel Clemens, operating on a man for appendicitis in Southern hospital. England. The patient's heart stopped beating, and Dr. Clemens swiftly and skillfully made another incision above the first. Inserting his hand, he gently massaged the patient's heart. It started beating again and the man recovered.

Missionary Will Be Honored

Carried Out Pioneering Work Among Indians At Coast

One of British Columbia's outstanding pioneer Indian missionaries, Rev. Charles Montgomery Tate, will be honored in June this year with the unveiling of a bronze memorial plaque in St. Andrew's-Wesley United church, in connection with Vancouver's golden jubilee celebrations.

Born in England, he worked there in his youth as a butcher-boy. He came to British Columbia at the age of 17 to make his fortune in the Cariboo gold mining fields, but was told by miners in Victoria that the Cariboo Eldorado had been disappointing.

He then went to Nanaimo to work in the coal mines. Soon a strike of the miners threw him out of work and he began to visit with the Indians and to teach them the English language.

Later he was given a position teaching the Indians and was paid $25 per month. In 1870 he was ordained at the first Methodist conference in Victoria.

Mr. Tate translated portions of the scripture into the Chinook language; established a boarding school for Indian children at Sardis, B.C., which later was called the Coquitlam Institute, and did a great deal of other pioneering work amongst the Indians.

He died in Vancouver in February, 1933, at the age of 80.

The Vimy Pilgrimage

Some Employees Granted Leave Of Absence With Pay

One event presently warming the hearts of pilgrimage executives is the Pilgrimage to Vimy organized by the Canadian Legion for July, 1936. Some 5,000 are expected to participate, and the mission in France will conclude with the unveiling of the Canadian War Memorial on July 26. Many have already shown their desire to co-operate with the boys who fought for us "over there" by enabling them to take advantage of this opportunity. In some cases four to six weeks leave-of-absence with pay has been granted to ex-soldier employees. In their brief day they caught the torch, held it high. We, in our small way should help perpetuate the memory of those who passed it on.—Canadian Business.

Beard Great Protection

More Necessary In Morocco Than Night Fires Or Rifles

Flowing beards were more protective than rifles and night fires in Morocco for Kenneth Chapman and A. B. Cozens, who returned to Cambridge, England, after an adventurous trip in the lonely heights of the Middle Atlas Mountains. They gathered 2,000 strange insects, including many hitherto unknown species. Wild animals prowled near their little tent at night; swarms of enormous, biting insects invaded them; hostile tribes hovered menacingly around them 7,000 feet up. But their beards saved them. "With the natives of Morocco it pays to grow a beard, which gives you status," said Chapman. "They have no respect for a beardless man. That was one reason the other was to protect our faces from the giant wingless grasshoppers that were a terrible nuisance. They crawl onto your face and chew it."

Many People Quote From Kipling's Works Without Knowing It

Familiar quotations from the works of Rudyard Kipling are legion, often tripping from the tongue without realization, by their users, of their origin. Here are a few of them:

"The Colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady are sisters under the skin."

"East is East and West is West, and never the twain shall meet."

"A rag, a bone and a hank of hair."

"You're a better man than I am, Gunga Din!"

"So I learned about women from her!"

"You're a pore benighted heathen, but a first-class fighter" man."

"'Tis clever, but is it art?"

"A fool there was."

"Westward the course of Empire goes."

Among Kipling's poems familiar as songs are:

"On the Road to Mandalay," "Danny Deever," "Telling Down To Rio," "Pussy-Wurzy and the Ladies" (I learned about women from 'er).

Among the most familiar recitations in the world are Kipling's "Gunga Din" and "If."

SELECTED RECIPES

DUTCH APPLE CAKE

1½ cup basic sponge
¼ cup milk
¼ cup butter
¼ cup sugar
1 egg
½ teaspoon salt
3 apples (approx.)
Cinnamon

Add beaten egg to creamed butter and sugar. Add this with milk to 1½ cups sponge and make up into soft dough with flour and salt. Knead lightly and place in well greased bowl in warm location until doubled in bulk (about 1½ hours). Roll out ¼-inch thick on board—cover bottom and sides of round shallow cake tin with the dough. Brush with melted butter and sprinkle with sugar.

Cut apples in sixteenths and press into dough standing on edge in circular rows. Sprinkle with cinnamon and place a few pieces of butter on top of apples. Cover and let rise for ½ hour then bake, with temperature about 380 degrees F. This recipe makes two Dutch Apple Cakes.

Fear Milk Is Fattening

London Schoolgirls Refuse To Drink It On That Account

Schoolgirls in London, England, are afraid milk will make them fat. More than 5,000 of them, according to the chief medical officer of the Board of Education, spurned the special milk price of one cent for a third of a pint during 1935.

A questionnaire revealed that 23 per cent, dislabeled milk "because it is fattening," 1 per cent, thought they were "too old" for it and 4 per cent, preferred to spend their spare coppers on candy.

FLEMING'S FOLLY

— BY — LAWRENCE A. KEATING

SYNOPSIS

The story opens with Link Fleming addressing a meeting of Boone County cattlemen together with the object of forming an irrigation company.

Roper Kilgo, the boss of the Ravidae and nearby ranges, who seemed to approve the plan, but was really opposed to it, forced Link Fleming, a delinquent mine engineer, whom Kilgo knew would be called upon to give his expert opinion in favor of the scheme, to reverse his earlier endorsement, and declare that irrigation in Boone county so far as Hamilton's plan was concerned, was only a new-fangled way to waste money.

The meeting terminates, but Buzz Hamilton and his sister, Helen, Link and Kilgo stay behind and Helen accuses Fleming of trying to influence his sister and, as he asserts, ruin his "spread". Buzz shoots at Fleming in an uncontrollable fit of anger, but Buster Townsend, Link's foreman, is unharmed. Link is arrested. The doctor attends Townsend and dresses his wound. Kilgo Roper arrests Fleming to take him home, but he refuses and Fleming escorts her home instead. This incident caused Roper to declare open hostility to Fleming. Helen and Fleming form a partnership to provide irrigation for their own properties. Link goes home, and is surprised to find Kilgo there ahead of him. Kilgo tries to induce Link to drop his scheme, and when Fleming refuses, gives a signal by taking off his hat, and Link is shot at from outside the house. Link kills Kilgo out of the house. Buzz Hamilton is sentenced to three years' imprisonment for shooting Bud Townsend. On his way home after the trial of Buzz was over, Link meets Scott Torney, who starts telling Fleming why he withdrew his approval of the water scheme. Just as he was about to tell the name of the man who had forced him to do so, Torney is shot and killed by a rifle bullet. Link hunts around to find the killer, but finds nothing. He comes across Jackpot Mell watering his horse, and Jackpot warns Fleming that if he wished to live he had better leave the district.

(Now Go On With The Story)

He gave up the search. "I'm obliged about the land. It's going to be worth a good deal more than you and Kilgo thought. Jackpot," he went on slowly, his brown eyes travelling over the man's light figure, "you could have killed Torney, and you wouldn't have turned a hair doing it. I have a hunch somebody made him talk like he did at the meeting. In fact, Soak told me so, Well," he ended, turning away. "I've got to mosey."

"Hold on."

Mell's sallow countenance wore its accustomed look of masked derision, but there was a little edge to his tone. "Link, you ought to quit these parts. Runnin' a place in town like mine, a man overhears things."

"I see. Just a friendly tip, eh?"

"Shore! We always got on good enough, but I'm not the kind to keep mum to my friends. Seems like I can't remember who I heard talkin'!"

He frowned, then winked. "I've been lots of different places in my time. Found out it's mighty good sense to get elsewhere before trouble bushes out."

"I never did own any baggage, Jackpot."

"By the way, when you get to town tell the sheriff there's a corpse here for him to see."

Mell shrugged, then strode to his horse and mounted. He did not so much as glance back, but urged his roan along the spring bed in the direction of the road. Link followed afoot, watching until the man disappeared toward Ravidae.

He searched another half hour for tracks or some clue to the identity of Soak's killer. There was none. Hearing hoof-beats, he stepped out of the trees onto the road. To his surprise it was Honest John Mulrooney he saw, and Marty Bush, instead of the sheriff.

They pulled up. "Who's lyin' there?"

"Soak Torney. He and I were talking and somebody shot him. I haven't found out yet who did it."

Bush dismounted. "Do you know why?"

He nodded. "Torney hasn't been seen since the meeting, you know. He stepped out of the trees and stopped me. Started to say who scared him into going against the irrigation scheme at the last minute. Soak was all for it before, but somebody scared him into talkin' like he did. It looks kind of queer."

He broke off as Sheriff Stephen and the shorter, pudgier figure of Coroner Ed. Spraggins rounded the bend, seated in a buckboard. They drew up and climbed out. Amos was all for it before, but he refused and Fleming escorts her home instead. This incident caused Roper to declare open hostility to Fleming. Helen and Fleming form a partnership to provide irrigation for their own properties. Link goes home, and is surprised to find Kilgo there ahead of him. Kilgo tries to induce Link to drop his scheme, and when Fleming refuses, gives a signal by taking

"I'm a prised yer hangin' around. Link. After killin' a man most guys light out."

Astonishment swept over the Star Loon's owner's face. He stared blankly at Stephen, then looked with puzzled uncertainty at Bush and Mulrooney. "You mean," he demanded at last, incredulously, "you think I killed Soak?"

The other grunted. "We got word you did. Where's the rifle? Had plenty of time to get rid of it, of course."

Spraggins nodded to this. The cattle agent and Mulrooney looked startled as they drew nearer. "Sheriff, if Mell told you I killed Torney, he lies!"

Stephen jerked at his straggly grey mustache. "Oh, Jackpot's a smooth liar, all right. But I reckoned you'd say that. Self-defense, wasn't it?"

"I didn't shoot him at all. Soak stepped out of the trees as I rode along. He started to tell me who made him back down on the irrigation scheme at the meeting the other day. Before he got it out he was shot. I went after the fellow, but found Mell watering his horse at the spring. He claimed he didn't do it—and I couldn't find a rifle on him or anywhere around."

"Do you think I'd hang around here waiting for you if I killed Soak? If it was self-defense, I'd ride for you myself. If it was murder, I'd be miles away by now."

Silence fell. "That's your story, eh?" Amos reached for his hip pocket and drew out a pair of manacles. "First I'll take that shotgun, Fleming. You've sounded weak to me. Had plenty cause to want Soak dead, didn't you? So you could maybe talk ranchers into the waterin' scheme? So long as he was around, the main authority on it, you couldn't make much headway. I'll have to take you in, Link."

"You've sounded weak to me. Had plenty cause to want Soak dead, didn't you? So you could maybe talk ranchers into the waterin' scheme? So long as he was around, the main authority on it, you couldn't make much headway. I'll have to take you in, Link."

Yuh spoke and held the sheriff at bay until he could make a swift escape. But he stifled this. It would brand him with the appearance of guilt. He was wholly innocent: the proper thing to do was to insist on that.

Stephen was stretching out his hands with the manacles when John Mulrooney uttered a dry chuckle and stepped close. "Who says Link killed Torney, Sheriff?"

"Jackpot Mell. Claims he had a gift for dear life or he'd have got it too. Says he met Soak, who told him Link kept him prisoner, but he got away. Jackpot didn't know till Link shot that he followed 'em here."

"I'm. No. never did."

The cattlemen grinned and shook his head. "Ever hear of Mell runnin' from a gunfight?"

"I'm. No. never did."

"Guess Jackpot keeps too late hours," Mulrooney drawled. "Works on a man's brain like the tremens. Why, this killin' couldn't have happened that way. Amos—not without Marty and me knowin'." We been with Link the last hour.

The lawman stiffened, uttering an exclamation. Even the uncomical Spraggins blinked and slowly shifted his gaze to Bush.

"Been with him an hour?"

"Have we, Marty, or not?"

The cattle agent struck a match on his boot sole. "Of course."

Fortunately Stephens was not looking at Link at the moment, so that he had time to master the amazement that rippled over his tanned face. When Amos scowled back his expression was calm, uninformative.

"Huh! You claim that too?"

"Might as well, Sheriff. It gets me out of a jam, doesn't it?"

A piercing look was the answer. "Come on, Amos, forget this. It was just a little joke on Mell's part. I reckon," Marty urged. "Why, Fleming isn't a killer! And like he said, it's unreasonable to suppose that if he did shoot Torney, he would wait around an hour for you to come."

Stephen removed his hat and scratched his head. "All right," he declared with irritated reluctance. "You can go, Link. But dang it, I'm goin' to look into this plumb thorough! Willin' to swear you didn't have a rifle along to-day?"

"I am."

"Haven't you don't know how Torney got killed?"

"Haven't any idea as to the killer—no."

"H'm. I ain't satisfied, by a dumb sight. Might hear from me later." Relieved, but trying to keep betrayal of that fact from his face, Fleming sought his horse. A moment later he rode off with Bush and Mulrooney. When they were out of earshot he faced them.

"Well, what made you do it? Do you know who shot Soak from ambush?"

"Course not! But look 'ere, Link: who did?"

"Haven't any idea, Marty. Don't even know why Jackpot should want suspicion on me. Why should he try to put me away like Buzz, and maybe for a longer time?"

Honest John looked troubled. "You're too believin' in folks. Why, any dog with a sore foot can tell when it's hard walkin'. Guess you can't, though. Uh—Marty and I figured yuh ain't a killer, so we led to Amos. Ain't sorry neither. But..."

"He hesitated."

"Speak up, John. Both of you have something on your minds. I can see that plain enough."

They exchanged looks. "Yeah. You know that promise I made in meetin', to go along with yuh on this irrigation?"

"Sure. Bush spoke up too. I might glad you aren't scared of the plan, like all the rest of these old-fashioned cow prodders. Why, there never would be progress if everyone—"

"Wait, will yuh?" Mulrooney shifted uncomfortably in his saddle and stared into the distance. "That's what I'm gettin' at. Yuh see, my old woman's been sick a long time. And I had trouble with my steers when that spring went dry, and what with one thing and another, I'm hard up. Mind if I pull out of your scheme?"

"Ain't no—if you don't mind, Link," Bush put in.

Silence. "I understand, boys," he said quietly. "You backed me in the meeting just for effect. For effect. For friendship's sake. Like yuh lied to Sheriff Stephen, because you didn't want to see me in trouble. That it?"

"Well..."

"You feel like the others, that irrigation is some crazy modern scheme for wastin' money, I'm grateful for your backin'," he said sincerely as he strove to conceal his disappointment. "I surely am. You did me a good turn both times."

"Aw, Link, you oughtn't to go into this water scheme. Why, everybody thinks your plumb loco!"

They neared the fork in the road where Bush and Mulrooney would turn off. The sudden sly was going a deeper grey, yielding slowly to night. The wind had sharpened to a little keener and snow continued to fall in a steady, melancholy swirl. The Star Loon owner stopped his horse.

"I believe in it, boys."

Bush expelled tobacco juice. "Buzz doesn't, though. If Helen goes in with yuh like I hear you've persuaded her to, folks'll say you had Buzz put away so she could manage their spread."

Link looked sharply at the cattle agent. "Folks would gossip about sunshine if there was nothing better. That wouldn't concern me. We ain't go through with this thing. I'm set on it, sure it will work."

They shook their heads. "There'll be opposition, Link. Like this Soak Torney affair. And that shootin' the other night. Was Kilgo out on a friendly call, or what?"

The Queen's Bridesmaids

Eight Attendants Out Of Original Ten Are Still Living

Although 42 years have passed since the late King and Queen were married, Princess Victoria was only the second of Princess Mary of Teck's ten bridesmaids to pass away. To be sure, most of them were very young, some were children, at the time. With the exception of Princess Victoria and her cousin, Princess Helen Victoria, all of them are married. The now only surviving sister of the bridegroom of that summer day—which was also Princess Victoria's 25th birthday—is Queen Maud of Norway. Of the three Princesses of Edinburgh one married into Spain, one into Russia, one into Germany. Princess Margaret of Connaught, decade these fifteen years, became Crown Princess of Sweden; Princess Ena of Battenberg is ex-Queen of Spain. Princess Alicia of Albany and Princess Patricia of Connaught married at home, becoming Countess of Athlone and Lady Patricia Ramsay respectively.

Star Mouth-Organ Players

Band Of Ten Use 250 Instruments Each Week

A man who carries with him 1,500 mouth-organs arrived recently in London.

He is Borrah Minevitch, and his band of ten of the world's star mouth-organ players which opened at the Piccadilly Theatre of varieties, uses 250 instruments each week.

Mr. Minevitch who curus 1700 a week, was a novelty in Boston, Mass. when he first played a mouth-organ to amuse his customers. He claims that since then he has increased the sales of the instruments by more than 22,000,000 a year.

These hard times do hit some people hard. Canadians were able to spend only $50,000,000 for new passenger cars during the first six months of 1935, says the Farmers' Advocate.

A new type of fire-resistant glass will stand heat up to 850 degrees Fahrenheit for an indefinite time without breaking, and greater heat for shorter periods.

The Order Of Succession

Line For British Throne As It Now Stands

The sons of the Sovereign and the children of the children in the order of succession to the British throne, and after the youngest son, the daughters in order of their own seniority.

With the accession to the throne of the Prince of Wales, the eldest son of the late beloved king, the order therefore stands as follows:

The Princess Elizabeth, daughter of the Duke of York.

The Princess Margaret, second daughter of the Duke of York.

The Duke of Gloucester.

The Duke of Kent.

The Prince Edward George, son of the Duke of Kent.

The Princess Royal (Princess May) wife of Earl of Harewood.

The Viscount Lascelles.

The Hon. Gerald Lascelles.

Mrs. Smith: "What rent do you pay?"

Mrs. Jones: "I don't pay it."

Mrs. Smith: "What would it be if you did pay it?"

Mrs. Jones: "A miracle."

Children's Colds Should Have This Safe Treatment

Young Mothers Benefit from Two Generations' Proof of This External Treatment For Fighting Colds.

IT AVOIDS CONSTANT "DOSING"

There's nothing like a child's cold to upset a young mother. And mothers of two generations, anxious to help end colds, have depended on Vicks VapoRub. It is effective—external—and safe. It avoids the risks of constant "dosing," so often upsetting to children's delicate digestions. Just rubbed on throat and chest at bedtime, VapoRub nets few cures at once.

1. By stimulation through the skin, like a poultice or plaster.

2. By inhalation of its penetrating medicated vapors, released by body heat and breathed in direct to inflamed air-passages.

Continuing through the night, this combined vapor-poultice action loosens phlegm—softens irritated membranes—eases difficult breathing—helps break congestion.

Each year, more and more families are being helped to fewer colds and shorter colds by Vicks Plan for Better Control of Colds. Vicks Plan has been clinically tested by practicing physicians, and further proved in everyday use by millions. Full details of the Plan in each package of Vicks VapoRub.
